StreetFocus aims to make it easy for you to find out what changes are proposed near you.

Whether you want to find out what changes might happen on your street, or are a group wanting to monitor development of your city, StreetFocus will tell you.

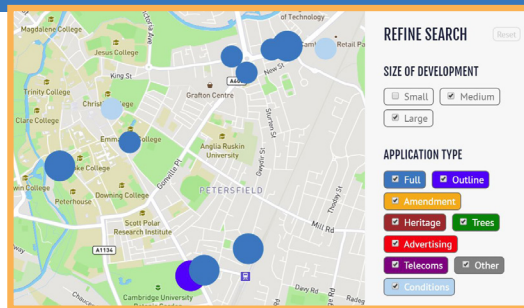

You can view all the planning applications in your area – just go to www.streetfocus.uk and search for your street!

You can get alerts when new proposals arise - just hit the button to sign up, free.

Maybe you're part of a community group concerned about road safety in your city? Just use the filters to show only larger applications which could create traffic.

We've added transport heatmaps, to help you put proposed new buildings in context.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

Head to www.streetfocus.uk on your mobile or your computer. It's free!

Search for a street, or place (or a planning application number)

You can discover proposed new developments in the area. Click on any marker to see details.

We'll show you information about the proposal, and pick out key documents.

To respond, just use the main button to be taken to your council's website, where you can give comments.

You can get free planning alerts, so you can monitor an area.

We also try to match larger applications with potential community projects, which you can propose!

WHAT ARE PLANNING APPLICATIONS?

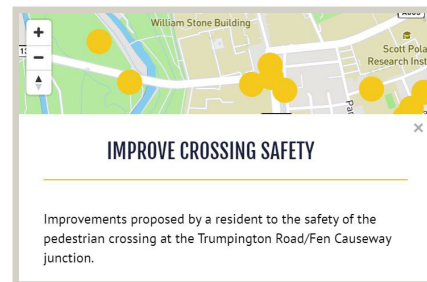

Planning permission is needed whenever most kinds of building work are proposed to be done. These are things like:

- Building new flats and offices
- Neighbours adding extensions
- Major new housing estates
- Tree works
- Changes to heritage sites

All of these need permission from your local council. They allow you to object, support, or comment on these changes.

Perhaps the new development could also pay for street improvements that you've long wanted.

But are you aware of the proposed changes? StreetFocus makes it easy to find out and comment.

IMPROVING STREETS NEAR YOU

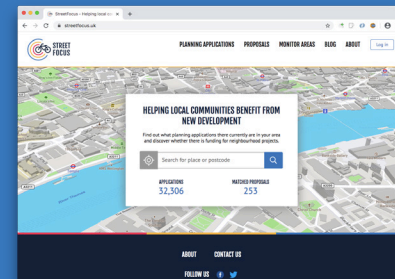

Larger developments can create traffic and other problems, so councils often make the developer pay for nearby improvements to public places.

These could be things like better paths, traffic calming, cycleways, and nicer parks.

You can register your ideas on the StreetFocus site, and if a planning application nearby arises, we'll match it up!
